

Mississippi River & Clock Vision 6-7-26@8:02 PM Shared 6-9-26

While praying again, I began seeing this vision. I see, I see the Mississippi River. I know just by looking at it, it is the Mississippi River. I see beneath it and know that the ground is shifting and dividing in places in preparation for America to be split, divided into two halves physically.

I see a clock face suspended in the air, in the sky. The Mississippi River is still in the background. The clock face is round and solid white with black Roman numeral numbers. The one hand is on the 10 and the big hand is on the 6. The smallest hand, the gold seconds' hand is coming to the 20 second mark. It's advancing quickly.

I see the big hand is on the 6, and the small hand is on the 10. These hands are black in color with pointed ends made in a fancy scrollwork arrow design. Now it looks like the round clock face is hanging on a thin single black string, or possibly a wire. The clock face begins turning to the left like something does when it's hanging downward on a suspended string. I see that it keeps turning and twisting on the string until the back of the clock face has become visible. It's still hanging from the string. It's solid white. I see the back side of the clock face it's all solid white. There's nothing on its back. I don't see any markings or displayed time showing. It's blank, totally void of anything on it except for it being solid white.

Suddenly, I see on its solid white back what looks like an electronic clock face that has appeared out of nowhere that has flip numbers on it. So, every time a minute or hour changes, it flips a number covering the prior one. The numbers are black on a white background. The number in the hour position is a 6, while the minutes are in a mid-flip position making it impossible to see what it is. I see it's changing. As it changes from the prior number to the new one I now see it is displaying the number 20. The time displayed on the electronic clock located on the back of the white Roman numeral numbers clock face is 6:20. It's 6:20. I can see the Mississippi River is still in the background as before.

I see once again the clock face begins turning on the string back into its original front facing position. It still has the Roman numeral face and the clock's time is in the same position as it was at the start; only the second gold hand has not moved off the 20 second mark. I see on the clock face's front the long hand is still on the number 6 and the shorter hand is still on the number 10, while the second hand is still at the 20 seconds position mark in time.

Suddenly the clock begins shaking violently. I see it shaking violently like something terrible of great force has occurred. It's still suspended on the string. I see, I see nothing. Now I see nothing at all. Everything has gone totally dark. "What is it Lord? What's going on?" It's still dark. I see nothing. Wait! I see there's a small sliver of light that reminds me of a beam of light, or a ray of light beginning to shine. It illuminates the area enough for me to see the front of the clock face again. It is now totally charred black, with nothing discernible of any of the hands, or even the white color of the face of the clock and it is still hanging on the black wire or string. I also still see the Mississippi River in the background.

Now, now I see the once white, but now charred totally black clock face begin twisting and turning on the wire again as it did before. "What now! What does it mean Jesus Christ?" "Watch Daughter." I see that once again the clock face has turned fully around. I see it's back now again. It's still white with the electronic flip clock still displaying the time of 6:20. It shows no sign of being damaged or charred black. Suddenly, the whole sky lights up. I hear a loud blast of noise. I see, I see something is happening. The Earth, the Mississippi River, they look like they're shaking! Something is causing the Earth to shake violently and it's affecting the river.

I hear a groaning noise, I hear the ground groaning and now I see, I see it's beginning to split open. The land is splitting by the Mississippi River and through it. "Oh, Jesus Christ, I'm seeing it again. I'm seeing America-Babylon being split, divided into pieces once again." "She who divides My nation land of Israel gets divided themselves. America-Babylon is the root source of Israel being divided Daughter, and so it shall be and so it shall come." And now it's gone, the vision is gone.
