

A Little Bit of Honey!!! 12-11-19@3:52 AM Journal Entry

As I was at the kitchen counter making some coffee in the coffee maker like I do most mornings, this morning I found myself trying to make it without the coffee grounds. I had to laugh at myself. As I was waiting for the coffee to get done, I started to put some honey and milk in advance in my coffee cup, a practice which I do quite often. Only this time while putting the honey in I managed to drop some on the rim of the honey jar. No big deal you say. Well, it is if it remains on that rim and you place the lid back on it without wiping it off, because it will make the lid stick to the jar like an adhesive, like glue making it almost impossible to open.

You would need the strength of Samson in the Bible to be able to get the jar open again. I know this from experience. I am guilty of not wiping off the rim of the honey jar. Usually I will use a clean, damp rag and wipe the residue off, but not this time. Seeing it was only a small amount, only possibly a couple of drops at the most, I took my pointer finger on my right hand and took a quick swipe and removed the honey. Then I brought the finger with the honey on it and licked it off. No harm done right? Wrong!

Somehow that very small amount of honey managed to get on my middle finger and from there it spread quite rapidly all across my right hand. I had sticky all over my right hand but I hadn't really noticed it until I reached for something. As I was at the sink washing my hands, my beloved Savior began to speak.

That is like sin, Child, sweet to the taste (and it was), and you only consumed a small amount. Yet somehow that small amount of honey... of sin managed to spread and in most part... spread unknowingly. It only takes the smallest, minute particle, even the size of dust to contaminate the spirit and body with its wickedness and evil and it will spread like a contagious disease if left unchecked. That is why you must be on constant guard. Protect your heart and mind and if you do discover that somehow knowingly or unknowingly that you have managed to get the stickiness of sin within your life, then come to Me for I, Jesus will be just like your kitchen sink. I will wash away all traces of your sins and once again make you clean and pure before Me and Father God!

It took just a little bit of honey, a little bit of honey to make me realize just how easy it is for sin to spread, whether it be a known or unknown sin. Thank You Jesus for another lesson learned!"
