

Manhattan Burns with Judgment's Fire 10-19-26@7:20 PM

Take down My words, Daughter, and take them to the internet and let the cry echo throughout the lands of the world.

Babylon-America, that great harlot city of Manhattan has fallen...has fallen that vile city. Your time has come.

Declare it on the mountain tops. Shout it out across the seas. Bring the timbrel and harp, sound the shofars, for surely I say, this night she dies as a world power.

I cut your throat Manhattan of Babylon-America. Give her double, I say, for all the wicked, evilness she has caused. It festers out of her like an infectious sore filled with putrid pus that cannot be healed!

We would have healed her if her people would have repented, but she has refused.

Sound the warning cry again, oh watch-woman. For now destruction is upon you, and all who have listened and prepared their hearts in Me shall be ready for what is to come, and their blood shall not be on your hands watch-woman. Neither will those who laughed and mocked, scoffed, and ridiculed you and other of My children who brushed all My warnings away as if they were nothing more than mere fairy tales. Their blood I shall not require from you watch-woman, watchmen, and women who have sounded the warnings from Heaven's Gates.

"Daughter, oh Daughter, beloved of Mine, I once showed you a package. A big beautiful package that you were not supposed to open until the midnight hour. Remember Daughter?" "I do, Lord Jesus Christ." "Remember the moon, Daughter; remember the moon in that dream?" "Yes, it was more full than not. It was waxing, but not totally full yet." "It's within the quarter and not without when these foretold things begin."

Hear Me Daughter! Four boxes were inside your package that went with the big beautiful birthday. The fourth one that was for a later time was the darkness for three days that follows.

Your package time has come, Daughter; it has come and Babaylon's Manhattan burns with Judgment's fire this very night of the midnight hour, before dawn's early light I have warned was coming.
