High Wind Advisory March 11, 2026

by Seattle Fire Department on March 11, 2026 @ 11:59 am

Alert Seattle: The National Weather Service has issued a wind advisory for the Seattle area starting 3PM Wednesday until 6AM Thursday. Strong winds can cause power outages, falling trees, and downed powerlines. Please exercise caution while traveling and engaging in outdoor activities.

Filed Under: Smart911 Notifications

Stay Safe!

- Live Wire Warning
Keep your distance from a downed line and report it at 684-3000.
- Darkened Intersections
Treat all darkened intersections as a four way stop and to be cautious of drivers who may not stop.
- Apartments without Fire Alarms
Apartment buildings without power for long periods of time will lose their fire alarm systems. Conduct a fire watch to keep residents safe.
- Carbon Monoxide Poisoning
Do not use barbecue or other open flame sources in the home. The smoke from an open flame indoors can lead

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of people were left without power Saturday after high winds raked eastward from the Great Lakes region, leaving trees down and substantial property damage in their wake. Farther west, at least one person died in a massive wind-driven wildfire in Nebraska.

About 346,000 customers were still without electricity as of the late afternoon in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Michigan, according to PowerOutage.us, which tracks outages nationwide.
